This PROFESSIONAL TRAINING is taught by Kimberly Busbee, who has more than 25 years of acting, teaching, casting, directing and producing experience in theatre and film in major markets including Chicago, Los Angeles and New York.

Kimberly tailors this fun and challenging class to the skill and experience of the weekly attendees. The on-going studio format allows everyone to enter class at his or her own level; building skills while having the advantage of observing those with more working experience and allows for students to attend as possible, with no consecutive attendance required. Veteran actors are encouraged to come and refresh their craft, to learn new techniques and to push their limits in the areas of personal challenge and professional opportunities. Newcomers are encouraged to come get the training they need to break into acting.

Voice for the actor, script analysis, cold-reading, auditioning tips, stage movement and numerous techniques, including the respected Sanford Meisner, Eric Morris, Michael Chekhov and Stella Adler training are part of the class which prepares actors for working on stage or on camera, and deals with the many challenges including physical and emotional continuity when working in movies or television.

Also full of valuable information about the business of acting in multiple genres, environments and markets with lively discussions about auditions, agents, headshot/resumes, self-marketing and cross-promoting to nearby cities, this class teaches students how to effectively pursue their individual goals.

Performance opportunities for interested students wanting to practice their skills and be seen by agents, directors and casting personnel also may be offered through a scheduled Class Showcase.

NOTE: This class includes material with adult content and strong language from screenplays and plays.

Individual Coaching also available at $50 per hour, or 3 sessions for $125.
